SUPREME COURT ENDS LOCAL CASE

The supreme court has just handed down a decision in the somewhat noted case of United States Fidelity & Guaranty company vs. E. Marks, E. Kind, Southern Nevada Real Estate & Investment company and others, involving a mortgage for an aggregate of about $10,000 upon property on Main street. The litigation has been prolonged and is complicated. In 1907 the Tonopah Lumber company sued Marks and Riley for lumber furnished in erection of the Casino Athletic club and recovered judgment. Marks and Riley appealed to the supreme court and gave a stay bond in the sum of about $40,000 with the United States Fidelity & Guaranty company as surety. The supreme court affirmed the judgment against Marks and Riley and they paid all but about $8,000 and then the lumber company sued the surety company to recover this $8,000 and costs, etc., and later recovered judgment, and the surety company paid the lumber company.

At the time the surety company went on the stay bond, it obtained from Marks and Kind a mortgage upon their Main street property both in Tonopah and in Goldfield, to indemnify the surety company for any outlay. In the meantime Marks became insolvent; his realty was sold and it finally came into the hands of the Southern Nevada Investment company, of which Henry C. Schmidt was principal owner. The taxes on the mortgaged property were delinquent and a part of the property was sold and purchased by a third party for the delinquent tax. Later on the surety company sued to foreclose and to set aside the tax deed as fraudulent. The court set aside the tax deed, but held against the surety company on another point. It seems the surety company is a Maryland corporation; that Nevada statute provided that the same fines, penalties and obligations, etc., imposed upon Nevada corporations by Maryland statute, should be imposed upon Maryland corporations doing business here. The Maryland statute provided that foreign corporations such as surety companies should pay 6 per cent on premiums collected. Marks et al. asserted the surety company had done business in Nevada and failed to pay such premium, and hence was doing business unlawfully in Nevada, and that the mortgage was void. Judge Averill sustained this plea and gave judgment against the surety company. He also denied a new trial. On appeal, the supreme court reverses this decision and holds that the retaliatory law of Nevada, which had the effect of making the Maryland law the law of Nevada as against a Maryland corporation, could not be applied in the drastic manner attempted by the trial court.

The case is of considerable interest to the legal profession, as it involves points never before passed upon or raised in this state and which have not been directly adjudicated in the courts of any other state. The retaliatory law under which the defense was attempted has been repealed in Nevada, but there are other cases pending which arose before the repeal, which may be materially affected by the decision. It is believed the mortgage will now be foreclosed in due course and the money collected. H. R. Cooke represented the United States Fidelity & Guaranty company throughout the litigation, and P. E. Keeler, formerly of Tonopah, now of Long Beach, represented the defendants.
